1. Institution, name of the interviewee, position, contact.
2. Do you have an institutional presence in the department of Gracias a Dios? Please explain.
3. Do you know the safety and occupational health regulations for diving fishing? Please explain.
4. How do you evaluate the role of the State in the protection of human rights in the framework of industrial spearfishing? What gaps do you identify?
5. In relation to companies and their role in the respect of human rights (especially in labour and environmental matters), what gaps do you identify?
6. What good practices can be identified with regard to human rights?
7. What are the main complaints that this institution receives regarding human rights violations or affectations related to industrial spearfishing? Do they exist? And what are the main sanctions and reparation actions that have been taken, apart from the recent one from the IACHR Court?
8. Some civil society organisations or individuals have argued that the penalties associated with environmental crimes are low, and that companies would rather pay fines than change their behaviour. What do you think about this?
9. Does the public have sufficient information for the injured party to have access to complaint and redress mechanisms for industrial fishing workers' deaths and accidents?
10. What would you recommend to the three branches of government and business to improve respect for the human rights of people in industrial fishing?
11. What else would you consider to be relevant and should be addressed?
